BEGGARS IN MOSCOW

Two Months of Visiting Gives
Conditions

(Note: Poverty and sorrow exist in the Baltic republics but decent living and happiness is much more frequent than in Soviet Russia. H. R. Knickerbocker says in the tenth article of his series.)

WARSAW, Poland, May 23.—(INS)—There are some very poor people in this part of the capitalist world. There are beggars in Moscow too. It would be giving a false picture to turn one's face from the poverty that exists in Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Poland.

It would be just as false to fail to balance it. This investigation aims at giving a true picture and a whole one of the way people live under capitalism on the borders of Communist Russia.

Two months of intensive visiting with workers and peasants leave many high-lights and many shadows in one's memory. Here is Anna Mlodzinski, of Gorzewska 15, Warsaw. She and her 5-year-old son met us at the door, showed us into their parlor-bedroom, and before we had asked the second question she wrung her hands.

She has reason to. Her young husband, employed as a cake baker, has 100 zloty a month to support his wife, child and mother-in-law. One-fourth goes for rent, and that leaves 75 zloty a month for four people, and that means about 12 American cents a day apiece for everything, and that means tea and bread, potatoes and cabbage soup, every day 355 times a year. And nothing else.

But there are Amelia and Alexi Sosnowski who live with their three bouncing children in the magnificent complex of workers flat built on the other side of Warsaw by the Socialist party. He is a silver-smith; she works in a tobacco factory, and they earn between them 280 zloty a month, and their two-room apartment with its modern kitchenette beams with happiness, and their table is laden with appetizing food.

Back in Helsinki was that wretched family of seven, all living in one squalid room, dirty, and untidy, the children peaked and sickly, the father incompetent, the mother too worn out to care.

But there in Kymmene and Kaukas, center of the Finnish paper and wood industry, were those rows of model workers' homes, spruce as pine trees, with copper pots shining in their kitchens, and radio sets and laughing children, and plenty of space and plenty of food and fresh air and a good life.

In Reval was that poor old couple who were too feeble to keep their flat clean, and pitifully tried to hide it. But in Reval was that series of workers' homes entered at random. They were impressive for their cleanliness, their comfort, and the easy dignity of their housewives.

One woman wept in Riga, but it was our fault. She showed us over her squalid dwelling and it was clean as any human being could keep it, but the smell of slums was upon it, and the old lady apologized, said the rain came through and the rats were a bother. We went through her tiny budget. I missed a sum, and asked what she did with it.

Her face twitched. She explained the money went to keep her son in an insane asylum where he had to go because a heavy piece of metal struck his forehead in the factory where he worked. To turn the subject I pointed to a guitar on the wall and asked: "Who plays that?"

"He did," she answered, and then she cried.

But across the River Duna was the

SAYS HARD LABOR IN PRISON IS BIG JOKE

The Rev. Vincent Steffan
Addresses Kiwanis Members
at Doylestown

COMMON SENSE TALK

DOYLESTOWN, May 23.—"Political domination has cursed the penal institutions of this country," declared Rev. Vincent ("Dutch") Steffan, Presbyterian minister and visiting chaplain of the Eastern State Penitentiary, and a member of the American Criminal Congress, in a forceful address last night before the weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown, at the Doylestown Inn.

Probably no other address given in the ten years the club has functioned here, was better appreciated and more informative than the one given by the Philadelphia chaplain, one of the best informed men in America today on the subject with which he is fully acquainted.

Having for fifteen years himself "carried a number" instead of a name, the guest speaker, in a unique introduction of himself, starting as a boy of eleven, traced his criminal career from the slums of Philadelphia to the reformatory, the prison and the penitentiary, and then parole and freedom some twenty years ago.

Two Bucks county jurists in attendance frankly admitted to the guest speaker after the meeting that the address was one of the most sensible they have ever heard on penal institutions.

"Sadly, I am sorry to say, crime is on the increase," Chaplain Steffan declared. "The modern criminal is entirely different than the old type criminal with whom I was personally acquainted."

"Yes, it is only too true, but our system of dealing with modern crime in America today is nothing short of laughable."

"The door is open today throughout America for the meddlers who know nothing about penal institutions and the care and treatment of prisoners. It is a free-for-all in many penitentiaries. It is the meddlers' day but the time is coming when something must be done or crime will never decrease."

"I have been informed that your club last week heard an excellent address by a very eminent and distinguished State Police head from a neighboring state on the value of science in crime detection."

"This question of science in dealing with criminals is all bunk, from start to finish, except so far as it has to do with the detection of crime. You can have all the psychiatrists, all the psychologists and the other experts to assist you in dealing with criminals but mark this point—you will never change a criminal at heart by modern science."

"There is only one power on earth that can change a criminal's heart and that is the power of Almighty God."

"As an authority and speaking from actual experience, I can truthfully inform you that God-consciousness is absolutely necessary to change a criminal at heart."

"It is a deplorable fact that in these modern times, there is such an appalling laxity of interest on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen over this problem of crime. There is nothing that adds to our taxation bill like crime. Crime is on the increase, court costs are steadily growing, our police bill is getting higher every year and we are not interested!"

"Yes, we begin to think about this crime problem only when crime strikes at home."

Chaplain Steffan, very emphatically gave his listeners the benefit of his personal experience and named several remedies that will fit the bill.

"I am a strong advocate of the whipping post and capital punishment," Chaplain Steffan declared. "I would suggest that Kiwanis and every other service club in America work together seriously on this problem of crime and by all means advocate the whipping post."

"Hard labor at the penitentiary! That is the biggest joke in the world. Hard labor! Do you know that 75% of the convicts are kept idle all the time. Long sentences in the penitentiary without work are absolutely worthless in changing criminals. Long sentences are not necessary, that is why I advocate the whipping post."

Peck, gave musical numbers, readings, and pencil sketches. The following were nominated for the offices named: President, Mrs. Joseph O. Canby; vice-president, Mrs. Edwin W. Henry, Sr.; secretary, Mrs. Edward Davis; treasurer, Mrs. Ella Wessaw.

TRIP TO HARRISBURG IS MADE BY STUDENTS

Eighth Grade Pupils From
Croydon and Maple Shade
Participate

VISIT THE BATTLEFIELDS

A two-day trip to Valley Forge, Hershey, Gettysburg, and Harrisburg, was concluded Tuesday evening by eighth grade pupils of the Maple Shade and Croydon buildings, Bristol Township public schools.

The party of students was accompanied by Miss Mary Wanner, Andrew Jackson and H. C. Morgan, members of the faculty; and stops were made at the chocolate factory in Hershey as well as the Zoo, at public buildings of interest in the capital city, and the battlefields at Valley Forge and Gettysburg proved most interesting. Overnight in Harrisburg the party was accommodated at the Hotel Bolton and the Y. W. C. A.

LUNCHEONS SOLD CHEAPLY TO STUDENTS

Pay 17 or 18 Cents for Serving
Costing 35 or 40 Cents
Elsewhere

HOT PLATTERS, 15 CENTS

Because of the efficient management of the cafeteria at Bristol high school, students are enabled to purchase for 17 or 18 cents a luncheon that would cost them 35 or 40 cents elsewhere. In fact a hot platter luncheon appears on the menu each day for the sum of 15 cents. Needless to say there are at least 360 students who daily take advantage of the tempting foods provided.

Practically every item sold separately in the cafeteria is five cents. This also is an inducement for those pupils who provide their own sandwiches, and who wish to purchase a bowl of hot soup, a beverage or dessert.

The spacious cafeteria at Bristol high school, which has been operated in a most successful manner for years, has a seating capacity of 204. Three periods are arranged, with the seventh and some of the eighth grade students eating lunch from 11 to 11:30; the ninth and part of the tenth grades from 12 to 12:30; and the remainder of the senior high school from one to 1:30. All students partake of their mid-day meal in the cafeteria whether they purchase food there or not, it being the rule that lunches be eaten nowhere else in the building.

Dr. Dimitri Marianoff Visits Farm School

DOYLESTOWN, May 23.—National Farm School was visited yesterday by Dr. Dimitri Marianoff, general secretary of the Le Renouveau, an agricultural re-training school at Born, France, and son-in-law of the illustrious Professor Albert Einstein, of Princeton University.

Accompanied by Dr. Gustave Bucke, of New York City, the picturesque "man without a country," who married a daughter of the great scientist, made an inspection trip of the 1200-acre Farm School plant, mingled with the students and secured a great many ideas that he will put into operation in his school in France, established in 1933 to help German Jewish refugees who sought refuge in France.

Professor Einstein was to have accompanied his son-in-law to Farm School but he was detained in Princeton, but he conveyed to the school president, Herbert D. Allman, of Philadelphia, and Dean C. L. Goodling that he expects to visit Farm School himself in the near future. The Princeton professor is honorary president of Le Renouveau school.

"National Farm School should be an outstanding example for all people interested in agricultural development," Dr. Marianoff declared. "You have a wonderful institution, while our school in France is just a small sister to your place. 90 per cent. of our students are Jewish refugees and we have already graduated 20 young men in agriculture. Yes, Professor Einstein is heartily in favor with this idea of young Jewish boys returning to the soil."

Dr. Marianoff, who has no country at the present time, is a native of Russia. Later he lived in Berlin, and later went to France.

"I would like very much to become an American citizen, and I am going to take out my first citizenship papers next week in New York," Dr. Marianoff declared. "I am not sure whether my father-in-law will do the same thing or not but I know that he will never return and is greatly pleased with America."

"There was a great deal of propaganda against America spread in Europe when I left it two months ago, but after I was here but three weeks I found that the things that were said about America were nothing but lies. This is a great country, and I want to say that I had a false prejudice against America which I dropped after being here two weeks."

"I am happy to visit your school and to bring to you greetings from the students in my school in Born, France, situated in the Chateau de Born, 375 miles southwest of Paris, about 20 miles from the French town of Agen."

Six Naval Aviators Crash To Death in Pacific

By Ralph D. Jordan
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

Aboard the U. S. S. Pennsylvania with the U. S. Fleet in the Pacific, May 23—Six naval aviators crashed to their death in the Pacific near Midway Island during completion of the third phase of the navy's war game, late last night. The fliers were aboard a big naval bombing plane that had gone to the assistance of another plane that had made a forced landing in the ocean.

Those killed were: Lt. Harry A. Brandenburger, 37, of Illinois; Lt. (J. G.) Charles J. Skelly, of California; first machinist mate, T. P. Lits; chief radio man, F. M. Derry; machinist mate, A. Sharpe, and machinist mate, T. J. Proteau. Lt. Brandenburger lived at Belleville, Illinois; Lt. Skelly, San Francisco; Lits at Ocean View, Va.; Sharp at Heaven, Okla., and Proteau at Wrentham, Mass.

Shortly after dusk the plane which Lt. Brandenburger was piloting, which was a part of the "black fleet" bombers from Midway Island, flew over the "white fleet" headed for anchorage on the island, when about 50 miles from Midway Island, a dot in the Pacific, another Navy plane was forced down by engine trouble and made a safe landing on the water. Brandenburger changed his course and flew low and circled over the crippled plane, radioing the location to the destroyers. Evidently the pilot lost speed on the low altitude and went into a spin from which he could not emerge before striking the water. The big bomber struck with a terrific crash. The last heard from the stricken ship was at 9 p. m. (5 a. m., eastern daylight saving time). At dawn destroyers found the wreckage. A search was made for the bodies and later the wreckage of the plane was taken in tow by the light cruiser Raleigh and a mine sweeper, headed for Midway Island.

The fleet had been working on "Problem 16" of the war game. The casualty list for this problem was brought to 81 and four injured, by the bombing plane crash. Three planes have been lost and four destroyers damaged in this "Battle of Midway," which was completed this morning. It started yesterday afternoon with "black" bombing attacks on the "white" battle line. The "battle" continued through the night with special destroyers and submarine attacks, concluded at dawn in a general engagement. Shortly after dawn this morning, Admiral Reeves signaled "finish" to the engagement. The combined black and white fleet sailed for Pearl Harbor, Honolulu. They are due to arrive there Saturday.

NATIONALLY-KNOWN PAIR WILL LECTURE HERE

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Waters
To Tell of Experiences
In Russia

WERE THERE 2 YEARS

Residents of this vicinity will have an opportunity to hear John E. Waters, nationally known speaker, discuss present conditions in Russia at a public meeting to be held in the Bristol M. E. Church, Monday evening.

This meeting will be conducted under the auspices of the Americanization Campaign, sponsored by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, with Burgess Clifford L. Anderson acting as chairman.

Mr. Waters, who was for two years an employee of the Soviet Government, is touring the country making a series of such lectures, accompanied by his wife, who also speaks about what she saw in Russia. Their experiences should prove interesting.

According to Mulford L. Callanan, Exalted Ruler of the local Elks lodge, "the Waters will confine themselves to an unadorned recital of events in Russia to which they were eye-witnesses. They will describe the breakdown of religion, the disintegration of family life, the devastating famines and the wholesale imprisonment and slaughter of innocent men and women brought about by the Communists."

Mr. and Mrs. Waters will also address the students at the High School on Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the auditorium, and the Bensalem High School students in the afternoon at 1.30.

Before the lecture to be held in the M. E. Church, Miss Hilda MacArthur will give an organ recital, and the American Legion Cadets will march to the church, where they will act as ushers. This meeting is open to the public and admission will be by ticket which can be procured from members of the Elks. All lodges, service clubs and patriotic orders have been invited to attend.

Mrs. Frank R. Schneider Dies at Hulmeville Home

HULMEVILLE, May 23.—A longtime resident of this borough, Mrs. Annie Buehler Schneider, died suddenly at her Main street home yesterday noon. She was 69 years of age.

The deceased was the wife of Frank R. Schneider, and daughter of the late William and Annie Buehler. Born in Philadelphia, Mrs. Schneider had spent the greater portion of her life in Hulmeville. She was a member of Grace Episcopal Church.

Although in ill health for a time the late resident had been able to attend to her household duties. Feeling ill yesterday morning a physician was summoned, and shortly after he arrived, death occurred.

Survivors include: her husband; four daughters and three sons, Mrs. William Bacher, Springfield; Mrs. William Gross, Philadelphia; Mrs. George Zarr, Harriman Park; Mrs. William Blessing and William Schneider, Hulmeville; Frank, of Homestead, Florida; and Elmer, of Morrisville. The deceased also leaves a half-sister and two half-brothers in Philadelphia.

The Rev. James C. Gilbert, rector of Grace Church, will conduct the funeral service at the home of William Schneider, Water street, Saturday, at two p. m. Burial, which will be private, will be in Beechwood Cemetery, in charge of Charles Haefner, funeral director. Friends may call Friday evening.

Club Members Play Cards And Fete Their President

Fifty-six members and friends of the Travel Club enjoyed games of cards at the residence of Mrs. J. J. Williams, Bellemead Farm, yesterday.

The high scorers were: Mrs. A. Russell Burton, Miss Julia Abbott, Mrs. Samuel Roberts, Mrs. V. V. Vansant, Mrs. Ernest Lawrence.

After viewing the iris gardens of Mrs. Williams, the gathering was served with punch and cookies in the dining-room, at which time Mrs. Theodore B. Megargue, president of the club, was feted in honor of her birthday. She was presented with a bouquet of flowers, and the honored one read a poem written by Mrs. Walter Pitzonka in honor of the occasion.

THREE IMPLICATED IN WEISS MURDER ARE SENTENCED

All Enter Pleas of Guilty and Cases Are Finally Disposed Of

ECKERT TO BE TRIED

Last One of the Gang Will Go
On Trial at September
Court

DOYLESTOWN, May, 23.—In the presence of less than a dozen spectators in the same court room where thousands attended the trial of two principals in the Weiss murder case last March, District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn yesterday accepted pleas of guilty from three more defendants implicated in the Weiss case.

William "Big Nose" Weiss, Philadelphia alcohol racketeer was kidnapped from his Overbrook Manor home last October and taken to a Torresdale Manor bungalow where he was held for ransom money, shot to death and then tossed into the Neshaminy Creek at Croydon.

For that murder, Francis Wiley, 27, and his brother-in-law, Martin Farrell, 28, were convicted and sentenced to die in the electric chair. Their cases are pending appeal in the Supreme Court.

Yesterday, Mrs. Beatrice Wilkerson, 32, of 4351 North Sixth street, charged with accessory after the fact to murder; Joseph James Coffey, 27, of 1342 Newkirk street, Philadelphia, charged with accessory after the fact to murder and secreting a kidnapped person, and Harry Seibels, 40, of 1819 Rockland street, Philadelphia, charged with accessory after the fact to murder, pleaded guilty before Judge Calvin S. Boyer in Bucks county criminal court.

Mrs. Wilkerson, who kept house at the Torresdale Manor cottage where Weiss was held a prisoner, was given a suspended two-year prison sentence and placed on probation for two years.

Coffey, who is alleged to have stolen the automobile in which Weiss was kidnapped, was sentenced to four to eight years in the Eastern State Penitentiary. Seibels, who rode along with others when the route from Weiss' home to Torresdale Manor was mapped out, was given a suspended two-year prison sentence and placed on probation for two years.

Robert "Flat Nose" Eckert, the remaining member to the gang, who turned state's evidence during the trial of Farrell and Wiley, will be tried in September after the Farrell and Wiley appeals are disposed of by the Supreme court.

Eckert was in court yesterday but did not testify. Neither did any of the three defendants testify, or the state offer any testimony because of the fact all of the testimony was brought out in the Farrell-Wiley case.

Flarindo DiLisso Dies Suddenly at Home Here

An Italian resident of Bristol died suddenly after retiring last night. He is Flarindo DiLisso, 319 Brook street.

The survivors of the late Mr. DiLisso are: his wife, Annie; five daughters, Carmela, Rose, Theresa, Helen, Marie; three sons, Nelson, Joseph, and Michael, all of Bristol; two sisters, Mrs. A. Roberto, Bristol, and Mrs. Rose DiLisso, New York; and two brothers, Antonio, of Trenton, N. J., and Dominick, of Italy.

The deceased was a member of the Sons of Italy and the Mutual Aid Society.

NEW SKYSCRAPERS

"Sermons in stones and good in everything," says the poet, and we take note of a dispatch from Chicago announcing the forthcoming construction of the first skyscraper put up in the Windy City since 1931. It is a welcome harbinger of economic recovery; yet still more significant seems the fact that this "skyscraper" will have but 15 stories and, at that, will replace an existing building of 13 stories, which is to be demolished.

Buildings that soared toward the heavens, and the very name of skyscraper which was invented for them, describe better than anything we can think of the years of roaring prosperity that suddenly roared into a case of financial laryngitis. Where they did not express sheer vainglory, skyscrapers were a product of the inflated values assigned to land in business and financial centers which in turn reflected the unwillingness of important people, immersed in affairs of vast importance and permanence, to walk more than two blocks to reach their bank, or the offices of other important people. So a forest of towers rose toward the heavens to voice the boundless confidence of man in his importance and his destiny.

It was another Babel. Skyscrapers rose to scrape the heavens and, exasperated at this impertinence, the heavens fell.

Chicago seems to have learned little by its experience. Its new 15-story building is not a skyscraper; it is no more than a sky-patter, a very gentle gesture toward the heavens, as compared, say, with the Wrigley Building. Yet arrogant Chicagoans refer to their new skyscraper.

SPILL THE MILK AND CRY

If the Chicago Bar Association had been unaware that in the person of Senator Schall it entertained one of the chief senatorial baiters of President Roosevelt, one might lead an ear to the association's cries of "Shame! Shame!" when the senator from Minnesota turned a C. B. A. luncheon into a row by his attacks upon the President.

But everybody knows that Senator Schall is not only a political enemy of the President but perhaps even more unrestrained when attacking him and his policies than Huey Long himself. To differ with the President is one thing; to differ from him in wholly intemperate language, particularly if you are a member of the supposedly dignified and deliberative United States Senate, is something else again. Senator Schall's attacks on the white house almost invariably have been of such nature as to leave a most unpleasant ringing in Republican as well as Democratic ears.

Members of the Chicago Bar Association knew all this. It seems, therefore, that in their "Shame! Shame!" luncheon they merely presented one more scene in that old, old play of those who spill the milk and cry.

We are in favor of combines in restraint of trade if they restrain saxophones and such.

Among the things you can learn from a book on child training is that the author never had any children.

His friends are contending that Dr. Townsend should run for president. At the least, they contend they're his friends.

WHOSE WIFE?

A CYRUS K. MANTEL MURDER MYSTERY

by GLADYS SHAW ERSKINE AND IVAN FIRTH

SYNOPSIS

A man who said he was Wilbur Renton, phoned the police soon after midnight when he sees a woman apparently trying to kill a man on the penthouse roof of an apartment across the street from his own twenty-first floor window. A police radio car speeds two officers to the scene, they are whisked up the elevator, and the colored operator lets them into the living room of a Mr. Vane who is seemingly sleeping in a chair and denies knowledge of any trouble when aroused. When his wife is missing from both boudoir and bath, Vane becomes hysterical and soon lapses into a daze. Meanwhile, the police find the body of a nude, headless woman on the terrace. When they arouse Vane from his stupor and accuse him of killing his wife, he loudly denies the charge. He falls from a blow to the face and is knocked unconscious when his head strikes a brass fender. Inspector Ingles and Dr. Gilbraith, medical examiner, arrive. The former recognizes Lawrence Vane, noted portrait painter, as "a good friend," remarking: "He'd never do anything like that. I'd stake my life on it!"

CHAPTER III

The doctor totally ignored his exclamation.

"Any idea what he has taken?" he asked Larkin.

"Well, sir, I found a bottle of Veronal in the bathroom. He probably took that."

"I hope you haven't wiped off any possible finger prints," said the inspector, tartly.

"No, sir, I left everything just as it was, until you should get here."

"All right," said the inspector, "we'll get it later and hand it over to the finger-print people."

The doctor had already loosened Vane's clothing and managed to sit him upright. He forced one eye open, and with a small pocket flash peered into it. He grunted as if satisfied and then bending closer smelt his breath.

"Nothing much wrong here," he said laconically. "Nasty blow on the side of the head. Is a woman supposed to have done this?"

The officer flushed.

"No, sir," he said, "I'm afraid I'm to blame for that. He had been fighting mad one moment, and then all of a sudden seemed to go to sleep. I thought he was boxing, so I yanked him up and gave him a clip with my open hand and he fell over and hit his head on the fender."

The Inspector looked displeased, and Larkin, in answer to the unspoken reproach in his keen blue eyes, said, "I'm sorry, sir."

"All right, Larkin," acknowledged Ingles. "This has upset me a lot. Lawrence Vane is one of my very good friends. Where's his wife?"

Larkin hesitated, took a deep breath, and: "On the roof," he said.

"What?" exclaimed Ingles.

"Yes. Will you please come with me right away? It's a ghastly sight, I'll tell you."

The two men left the studio together and went out into the pitch blackness of the roof terrace.

Officer Larkin flashed his electric torch low as they stepped over the door sill.

"The body must have been dragged from this door to the far corner," he said. "There are distinct traces from here to where it is lying. But the curious part of it all is that there is no sign of any struggle."

Ingles nodded, and let the beam of his own torch follow the obvious track, until it fell on the huddled object propped up in the northeast corner.

"Good God!" he ejaculated, with a quick drawing in of his breath. "This is awful. It's unbelievable. Vane must have lost his reason. No one but a madman could have done this."

His whole six feet of brawny manhood seemed to shrink for a moment at the sight before him. In his many years of service he had had to see many horrible and sordid sights, but now the fact that his own good friend had committed this thousand times worse.

He forced himself to lean close and look carefully at that which lay within the ray of light from the torches; then with a shudder, he turned sharply on his heel.

"Come on, Larkin," he said abruptly. "Let's go and see if the doctor has got Vane round yet. If he has, we will soon see how he reacts to the sight of his own handiwork."

Vane was standing when they re-entered the studio though he was looking desperately ill. He swayed slightly as he tried to hold himself erect and the side of his head showed a swelling from the blow he had received in his fall. But he seemed composed and quiet. At the sight of the Inspector, his face lit up.

"Why, Ingles," he said, "I'm glad you're here. What is this nightmare? I've been bullied and told tales to, and knocked about, and for the life of me, I don't know what it's all about."

He held out his hand for the clasp

keep anyone else from knowing that he suffered each and every pain that his friend suffered.

For Lawrence Vane was a man to whom the term "lovable" could be applied with perfect truth. He was perhaps one of the most popular men in New York. He was kindly, generous, full of a gay good humor, a perfect host, and a very skilled and famous artist.

In silence, the sturdy officers and Lawrence Vane made their way out onto the terrace, and those who had already seen the horror on the roof dreaded that which they would have to look at again in the line of duty. For a few breathless moments they all stood in the dark—a dark-of his friend, but the Inspector ignored it. His steel blue eyes looked Vane in the face coldly and in their depths there was a challenge, and curiously a broken trust, overlaid by a hard hostility.

Vane cried desperately: "I'm in great trouble here. Isobel has disappeared. . . . We've got to find her. We've got to!"

The piteous look that came into the eyes of a stag, just shot, shone from Vane's startled glance. Slowly his rejected hand dropped to his side. He stared at the Inspector, his lips trembled in movement, but no sound came.

"Why, Ingles," he faltered at last, "why—what's the matter. Why do you look at me like that?"

"Lawrence Vane," answered Ingles formally, "I am here tonight in duty, not in friendship. . . . And that duty must and shall be performed. Stand up straight there! Now! Can you walk?"

"I don't understand, Ingles," Vane cried desperately, "I'm in great trouble here. Isobel has disappeared. I can't find her any place. You've got to help me, Ingles. You know I love her. We've got to find her. We've got to find her."

"We have found her," said the Inspector quietly; then his voice changing to his usual official tone, "Murphy," he said, "bring this man out onto the roof. We will soon find out who is mad in this affair."

With one last despairing look at his friend, Vane started forward. He was so weak that he could not guide his legs, and he swayed as he walked.

Murphy, in the most matter of fact way, frisked him for a possible gun, and now seeing him sway, he and Larkin caught hold of him on either side, and half assisted, half dragged him toward the door to the terrace.

Pathetically Vane protested. "Mayn't I walk alone?" he asked. "At least, Ingles, whatever this is all about, you might let me walk alone. I can't possibly run away."

"You know," I am all right now," it was a run-on sentence enough request and the Inspector was more touched than he cared to show.

"All right, let him alone," he growled, trying to keep the sympathy out of his voice—trying to

Inspector Ingles spoke . . . cold blue eyes fixed on his. . . "Lawrence Vane," he said bitterly, "you must be told as a material witness (I'm putting the matter mildly) in connection with the murder of your wife."

"Germany has the right idea. In that country the prisoners when admitted to the penal institution, goes through the whipping post. Then he serves a considerably shorter sentence than the average criminal in this country and two days before he leaves the prison he again goes through the whipping post. That system has done more to change a man's attitude toward crime than all the long, idle, prison sentences.

"Instead of having boards and agencies that should be a help to penal institutions and prisoners, we have allowed politics to dominate most of our penal institutions.

"It is an outright shame that former Attorney General Schnader was elected Governor of Pennsylvania at the last election. He is one of the best informed individuals on penology at this state.

"Is there any wonder that things were in a mess in Pennsylvania some time ago when a woman headed the Department of Welfare, a woman who was an outright Red and Communist?

"I sincerely hope that our present governor does not see fit to change the present set-up of officers and officials at our state penitentiaries, for if he does, there will be a terrible revolution within all the penitentiary walls of this state, just as sure as you are alive tonight.

"In Captain Herbert Smith, at Cherry Hill, in Philadelphia, you have the last word in men able to handle prisoners of the desperate type of housed criminals, and in Captain Keither, at Graterford 'pen,' you have exactly the same type of officer.

"The power of discipline is most needed behind prison walls today more than anything else and I can assure you that the Eastern 'pen' and the 'pen' at Graterford, since the riots of a year ago, is being governed by the power of discipline.

"There was nothing so deplorable as the revolt at the 'pen' recently! I was there and saw the entire affair. Think of it, a revolt of prisoners in an institution that serves as good food and as much as the average man of our days in your own home!

"In the home of the convicts, I go regularly. I see terrible sights, suffering that is almost beyond description, while the brute husband or some other upstart relative is having a good time

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

behind the walls of the penitentiary, taking it easy.

"The name penal, in connection with most of our prisons is a joke. It means nothing. The penitentiary is where crime breeds. Prisoners under the present system of mollycoddling are always worse when they get out.

"Think of it, just recently a guard at the 'pen' was reprimanded by a member of the Board for laying a hand on a convict! This sob-sister stuff, or whatever you want to call it is tragic and dastardly.

"It is not proper but it is correct that most of the improvements at Cherry Hill and Graterford were made by outside labor while the prisoners remained idle inside."

Poverty and Sorrow in Baltic States; Happier Than Russia

carpenter Chris Alderson and his wife with their good-looking young son whose competent oil paintings adorn the walls of their snug little home... the boy showed us four pair of skis he had made with his own hands, good as any Norwegian expert's. His draughtsman's instruments littered the room, and the old couple nearly exploded with pride as they explained he was going to be an architect.

The misery of the Jewish villages in Lithuania, their long rows of tumble-down houses, their knots of unkempt men and women, their bitter and embittered poverty stand out sharply in one's memory.

But so does the picture of Andrew Pozas, the market gardener near Kovno, whose wife boasted he had "clever fingers" and whose clever fingers in 15 years had built quite alone a farm for anybody to be proud of, with house and barns, and 4 cows and 2 horses and 100 chickens and five happy people.

Nothing can erase the scene in the wide street of the Polish village of Cuman, where groups of dull-eyed youths stood ankle-deep in mud, and hordes of shabby children, pale and pimply, shrank and ran as our carriage passed.

Yet here next door in village Derno was that gallant fellow Daniel Uichalok who labored fifteen years ago to give his good-looking, gray-eyed wife a decent home, and did it. The cradle rocked and the mother sang and we forgot the mud of Cuman.

In worker's homes and peasant's farms there is poverty and sorrow to be found in these five countries. Pure impressionism, the memory of things that stick in one's mind gives evidence that well-being, decent living, and happiness is more frequent than poverty and sorrow here, and much more frequent than in the Soviet Union.

NEW SKYSCRAPERS

"Sermons in stones and good in everything," says the poet, and we take note of a dispatch from Chicago announcing the forthcoming construction of the first skyscraper put up in the Windy City since 1931. It is a welcome harbinger of economic recovery; yet still more significant seems the fact that this "skyscraper" will have but 15 stories and, at that, will replace an existing building of 13 stories, which is to be demolished.

Buildings that soared toward the heavens, and the very name of skyscraper which was invented for them, describe better than anything we can think of the years of roaring prosperity that suddenly roared into a case of financial laryngitis. Where they did not express sheer vainglory, skyscrapers were a product of the inflated values assigned to land in business and financial centers which in turn reflected the unwillingness of important people, immersed in affairs of vast importance and permanence, to walk more than two blocks to reach their bank, or the offices of other important people. So a forest of towers rose toward the heavens to voice the boundless confidence of man in his importance and his destiny.

It was another Babel. Skyscrapers rose to scrape the heavens and, exasperated at this impertinence, the heavens fell.

Chicago seems to have learned little by its experience. Its new 15-story building is not a skyscraper; it is no more than a sky-patter, a very gentle gesture toward the heavens, as compared, say, with the Wrigley Building. Yet arrogant Chicagoans refer to their new skyscraper.

SPILL THE MILK AND CRY

If the Chicago Bar Association had been unaware that in the person of Senator Schall it entertained one of the chief senatorial baiters of President Roosevelt, one might lend an ear to the association's cries of "Shame! Shame!" when the senator from Minnesota turned a C. B. A. luncheon into a row by his attacks upon the President.

But everybody knows that Senator Schall is not only a political enemy of the President but perhaps even more unrestrained when attacking him and his policies than Huey Long himself. To differ with the President is one thing; to differ from him in wholly intemperate language, particularly if you are a member of the supposedly dignified and deliberative United States Senate, is something else again. Senator Schall's attacks on the white house almost invariably have been of such nature as to leave a most unpleasant ringing in Republican as well as Democratic ears.

Members of the Chicago Bar Association knew all this. It seems, therefore, that in their "Shame! Shame!" luncheon they merely presented one more scene in that old, old play of those who spill the milk and cry.

We are in favor of combines in restraint of trade if they restrain saxophones and such.

Among the things you can learn from a book on child training is that the author never had any children.

His friends are contending that Dr. Townsend should run for president. At the least, they contend they're his friends.

WHOSE WIFE?

A CYRUS K. MANTEL MURDER MYSTERY

by CLADYS SHAW ERSKINE AND IVAN FIRTH

SYNOPSIS

A man who said he was Wilbur Renton phones the police soon after midnight when he sees a man apparently trying to kill a woman on the penthouse roof of an apartment across the street from his own twenty-first floor window. A police radio car speeds two officers to the scene, they are whisked up the elevator, and the colored operator lets them into the living room of a Mr. Vane who is seemingly sleeping in a chair and denies knowledge of any trouble when aroused. When his wife is missing from both boudoir and bath, Vane becomes hysterical and soon lapses into a daze. Meanwhile, the police find the body of a nude, headless woman on the terrace. When they arouse Vane from his stupor and accuse him of killing his wife, he loudly denies the charge. He falls from a blow to the face and is knocked unconscious when his head strikes a brass fender. Inspector Ingles and Dr. Gilbraith, medical examiner, arrive. The former recognizes Lawrence Vane, noted portrait painter, as "a good friend," remarking: "He'd never do anything like that. I'd stake my life on it!"

CHAPTER III

The doctor totally ignored his exclamation.

"Any idea what he has taken?" he asked Larkin.

"Well, sir, I found a bottle of Veronal in the bathroom. He probably took that."

"I hope you haven't wiped off any possible finger prints," said the Inspector, tartly.

"No, sir, I left everything just as it was, until you should get here."

"All right," said the Inspector, "we'll get it later and hand it over to the finger-print people."

The doctor had already loosened Vane's clothing and managed to sit him upright. He forced one eye open, and with a small pocket flash peered into it. He grunted as if satisfied and then bending closer smelt his breath.

"Nothing much wrong here," he said laconically. "Nasty blow on the side of the head. Is a woman supposed to have done this?"

The officer flushed.

"No, sir," he said, "I'm afraid I'm to blame for that. He had been fighting mad one moment, and then all of a sudden seemed to go to sleep. I thought he was faking, so I yanked him up and gave him a clip with my open hand and he fell ever and hit his head on the fender."

The Inspector looked displeased, and Larkin, in answer to the unspoken reproach in his keen blue eyes, said, "I'm sorry, sir."

"All right," Larkin, acknowledged. "This has upset me a lot. Lawrence Vane is one of my very good friends. Where's his wife?"

Larkin hesitated, took a deep breath, and: "On the roof," he said.

"What?" exclaimed Ingles.

"Yes. Will you please come with me right away? It's a ghastly sight, I tell you."

The two men left the studio together and went out into the pitch blackness of the roof terrace.

Officer Larkin flashed his electric torch low as they stepped over the doorsill.

"The body must have been dragged from this door to the far corner," he said. "There are distinct traces from here to where it is lying. But the curious part of it all is that there is no sign of any struggle."

Ingles nodded, and let the beam of his own torch follow the obvious track, until it fell on the huddled object propped up in the northeast corner.

"Good God!" he ejaculated, with a quick drawing in of his breath. "This is awful. It's unbelievable. Vane must have lost his reason. No one but a madman could have done this."

His whole six feet of brawny manhood seemed to shrink for a moment at the sight before him. In his many years of service he had had to see many horrible and sordid sights, but now, the fact that his own good friend had committed this sickening crime made it seem a thousand times worse.

He forced himself to lean close and look carefully at that which lay within the ray of light from the torches; then with a shudder, he turned sharply on his heel.

"Come on, Larkin," he said abruptly. "Let's go and see if the doctor has got Vane round yet. If he has, we will soon see how he reacts to the sight of his own handiwork."

Vane was standing when they re-entered the studio though he was looking desperately ill. He swayed slightly as he tried to hold himself erect and the side of his head showed a swelling from the blow he had received in his fall. But he seemed composed and quiet. At the sight of the Inspector, his face lit up.

"Why, Ingles," he said, "I'm glad you're here. What is this night nurse? I've been bullied and told tales to, and knocked about, and for the life of me, I don't know what it's all about."

He held out his hand for the clasp

keep anyone else from knowing that he suffered each and every pain that his friend suffered.

For Lawrence Vane was a man to whom the term "lovable" could be applied with perfect truth. He was perhaps one of the most popular men in New York. He was kindly, generous, full of a gay good humor, a perfect host, and a very skilled and famous artist.

In silence, the sturdy officers and Lawrence Vane made their way out onto the terrace, and those who had already seen the horror on the roof shrank back in the line of duty. For a few breathless moments they all stood in the dark—a dark-of his friend, but the Inspector ignored it. His steel blue eyes looked Vane in the face coldly and in their depths there was a challenge, and curiously a broken trust, overlaid by a hard hostility.

The piteous look that came into the eyes of a stag, just shot, shone from Vane's startled glance. Slowly he rejected hand dropped to his side. He stared at the Inspector, his lips trembled into movement, but no sound came.

"Why, Ingles," he faltered at last, "why—what's the matter. Why do you look at me like that?"

"Lawrence Vane," answered Ingles formally, "I am here tonight in duty, not in friendship. . . . And that duty must and shall be performed. Stand up straight there! Now! Can you walk?"

"I don't understand, Ingles," Vane cried desperately, "I'm in great trouble here. Isobel has disappeared. I can't find her any place. You've got to help me, Ingles. You know how I love her. We've got to find her. We've got to!"

"We have found her," said the Inspector quietly; then his voice changing to his usual official tone, "Murphy," he said, "bring this man out onto the roof. We will soon find out who is mad in this affair."

With one last despairing look at his friend, Vane started forward. He was so weak that he could not guide his legs, and he swayed as he walked.

Murphy, in the most matter of fact way, frisked him for a possible gun, and now seeing him sway, he and Larkin caught hold of him on either side, and half assisted, half dragged him toward the door to the terrace.

Pathetically Vane protested. "Mayn't I walk alone?" he asked, at least, Ingles, whatever this is all about, you might let me walk alone. I can't possibly run away, you know. . . . I am all right now."

It was a reasonable enough request and the Inspector was more touched than he cared to show.

"All right, let him alone," he growled, trying to keep the sympathy out of his voice—trying to

"Germany has the right idea. In that country the prisoners when admitted to the penal institution, goes through the whipping post. Then he serves a considerably shorter sentence than the average criminal in this country and two days before he leaves the prison he again goes through the whipping post. That system has done more to change a man's attitude toward crime than all the long, idle, prison sentences.

"Instead of having boards and agencies that should be a help to penal institutions and prisoners, we have allowed politics to dominate most of our penal institutions.

"It is an outright shame that former Attorney General Schnader was not elected Governor of Pennsylvania at the last election. He is one of the best informed individuals on penology in this state.

"Is there any wonder that things were in a mess in Pennsylvania some time ago when a woman headed the Department of Welfare, a woman who was an outright Red and Communist!

"I sincerely hope that our present Governor does not see fit to change the present set-up of officers and officials in our state penitentiaries, for if he does, there will be a terrible revolution within all the penitentiary walls of this state, just as sure as you are alive tonight.

"In Captain Herbert Smith, at 'Cherry Hill', in Philadelphia, you have the last word in men able to handle prisoners of the desperate type of housed criminals, and in Captain Leithiser, at Graterford 'pen', you have exactly the same type of officer.

"The power of discipline is most needed behind prison walls today more than anything else and I can assure you that the Eastern 'pen' and the 'pen' at Graterford, since the riots of a year ago, is being governed by the power of discipline.

"There was nothing so deplorable as the revolt at the 'pen' recently! I was there and saw the entire affair. Think of it, a revolt of prisoners in an institution that serves as good food and as much as the average man of you eats in your own home!

"In the home of the convicts, I go regularly. I see terrible sights, suffering that is almost beyond description, while the brute husband or some other culprit-relative is having a good time behind the walls of the penitentiary, taking it easy.

"The name penal, in connection with most of our prisons is a joke. It means nothing. The penitentiary is where crime breeds. Prisoners under the present system of mollycoddling are always worse when they get out.

"Think of it, just recently a guard at the 'pen' was reprimanded by a member of the Board for laying a hand on a convict! This sob-sister stuff, or whatever you want to call it is tragic and dastardly.

"It is not proper but it is correct that most of the improvements at Cherry Hill and Graterford were made by outside labor while the prisoners remained idle inside."

carpenter Chris Alderson and his wife with their good-looking young son whose competent oil paintings adorn the walls of their snug little home... the boy showed us four pair of skis he had made with his own hands, good as any Norwegian expert's. His draughtsman's instruments littered the room, and the old couple nearly exploded with pride as they explained he was going to be an architect.

The misery of the Jewish villages in Lithuania, their long rows of tumble-down houses, their knots of unkempt men and women, their bitter and embittered poverty stand out sharply in one's memory.

But so does the picture of Andrew Pozas, the market gardener near Kovno, whose wife boasted he had "clever fingers" and whose clever fingers in 15 years had built quite alone a farm for anybody to be proud of, with house and barns, and 4 cows and 2 horses and 100 chickens and five happy people.

Nothing can erase the scene in the wide street of the Polish village of Cuman, where groups of dull-eyed youths stood ankle-deep in mud, and hordes of shabby children, pale and pimply, shrank and ran as our carriage passed.

Yet here next door in village Derno was that gallant fellow Daniel Uichalok who labored fifteen years ago to give his good-looking, gray-eyed wife a decent home, and did it. The cradle rocked and the mother sang and we forgot the mud of Cuman.

In worker's homes and peasant's farms there is poverty and sorrow to be found in these five countries. Pure impressionism, the memory of things that stick in one's mind gives evidence that well-being, decent living, and happiness is more frequent than poverty and sorrow here, and much more frequent than in the Soviet Union.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Luncheons Sold

Cheaply To Students

The quality and variety of foods on the menu each day is unusual, especially when the prices are considered. Two kinds of soup are provided each day; one kind of meat for the platter lunches, as well as a cold meat for the sandwiches; three vegetables; salads; the beverages include cocoa, orange juice, chocolate milk, and milk, and tea may be secured on order; the sandwiches vary and as a rule include cheese, meat, lettuce, etc. The desserts range from pies to cream puddings, gelatine, junket, ice cream, and all types of cakes. All sandwiches are five cents each, soups and beverages are the same price, and likewise desserts. The salads are six cents, and cakes are sold in five cent quantities. The 15 cent platter includes two vegetables, meat, slice of buttered bread, a beverage, and a small dessert.

Until about three years ago the board of directors supplied all equipment, but the method now followed is for supplies to be purchased from the small profit made through operation of the cafeteria. A new electric refrigerator was purchased within the past three years, and this year individual chairs replaced benches. All profits in the next two or three years will be used to pay off the loan for this latest purchase. In addition to the equipment the cost of the food, salaries for the three women employed in the department, paper for the machines used as well as for the necessary books, are paid for out of earnings. The cost is kept as low as it is because no funds are required from the earnings for light, heat and rent.

The three employees prepare the food, care for the dishes, and keep the cafeteria and dining-room in order. Mrs. Isabella Jackson, who has been in charge of the work for a number of years, is the purchasing agent and general supervisor. Paul D. Brown, a member of the faculty, is treasurer of the cafeteria department.

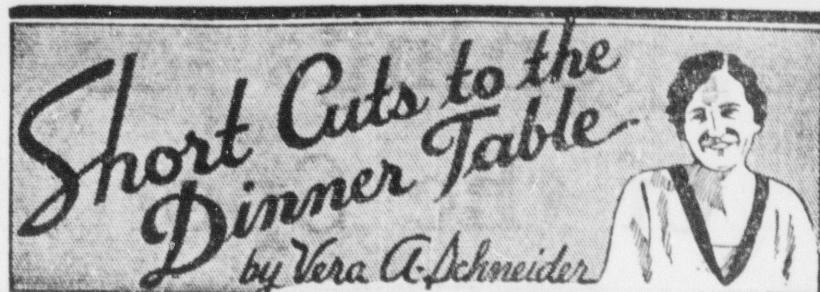

There has been worked out such a unique system for the operation of the cafeteria, that it is possible to tell at a glance just what the status is, financially as well as relative to supplies on hand. As one official at the school stated the system is believed second to none for this type of work.

The cafeteria from a business standpoint, is divided into 12 departments. Profits can be determined on any group of articles, such as on sandwiches, salads, etc. The purchasing agent is empowered to purchase in as large quantities as deemed necessary, in order to take advantage of savings. Although the price of food is rising, those in charge of the cafeteria have been able to keep the sales cost as usual.

Aid is given in the work by commercial department students. Each day three of these are assigned to the cafeteria, one observing, a second receiving the money, and the third registering sales on the machine. The machine used for checking and totaling the sales according to those in charge has a special arrangement found on no other machine. A double paper roll is used, with inked ribbon between. The portion of one showing an individual sale is torn off for the purchaser, and the duplicate roll remains intact to be retained in the machine until the day's sales are completed. The individual slips which eventually reach the cashier are turned over each day to the cafeteria treasurer, while the roll is checked that evening by the students in charge for the day. A report must be made on the following morning to the treasurer, to see that the total checks with the slips handed to him. Sales of varieties of articles are classified. This gives the commercial students much practical work, and each is assigned to this task about six times during the course of a school year. On the day following cafeteria duty the same students are engaged in assisting in the high school office.

As much of the food as possible is purchased locally, this including particularly fresh vegetables. Other items are secured from wholesale houses in the nearby cities. With the food being sold practically at cost the pupils, as well as teachers, are assured wholesome meals for a minimum outlay.

Purpose of the Garnish Explained!

A Garnish, Mrs. R. L., is the final touch added to make the dish at hand attractive and appealing to the appetite. Yes, without a doubt, I can say that parsley and paprika are the two garnishes more often used, for they are contrasting in color and fit into almost any color scheme. But, if you are looking for more elaborate garnishes, perhaps the following may be helpful:

Fancy shaped croutons, radish roses or radish chrysanthemums, lemon slices rolled in chopped parsley or paprika, olives, watercress, maraschino cherries, pineapple rings and anchovies. All these lend a finished touch and are well worth the effort expended in the making.

I'm going to devote the remainder of our column to request recipes.

Cherry Salad

(For Mrs. L. Rodman)

2 cupsful fresh cherries—pitted
1 1/2 tablespoonsful gelatin
1 cupful orange juice
1 cupful sugar
3 teaspoonfuls lemon juice
Walnut Meats
Cream Mayonnaise.

Strain juice from cherries. There should be one cupful. Add to this juice the sugar and bring to a boil. Soak the gelatin in the orange and lemon juices for five minutes. Place walnut meats in centers of pitted cherries. Add gelatin to the boiling sirup and allow it to partly congeal, then add to this mixture the stuffed cherries. Pour into ring mold, first rinsed in cold water and place in refrigerator until firm. When ready to serve unmold on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with whipped cream mayonnaise. This is made merely by blending equal portions of whipped cream and mayonnaise.

Strawberry Crumb Pie

(For Mrs. Louise Bailey)

18 Graham crackers—rolled fine
2 tablespoons sugar
1/3 cupful melted butter
1 cupful strawberries—halved
1 cupful sliced bananas
Sweetened whipped cream.

Combine sugar, graham crackers and melted butter. Press on pie plate and bake in a moderately hot oven for 10 minutes. When ready to serve add the strawberries and bananas and cover with whipped cream. Garnish with choice whole berries.

Chocolate Frosting

(For "A Bride")

2 cupsful 4-X sugar
4 tablespoonsful cocoa
4 tablespoonsful hot coffee
1 tablespoonful butter
1 tablespoonful vanilla.

Combine sugar and cocoa. Pour the hot coffee over the butter and when melted beat into the sugar and cocoa. Add the vanilla. When of proper spreading consistency spread on cake. If too stiff, add more coffee, or too thin, more sugar. Sufficient for a two-layer cake.

But we will let Dr. William Gordon, whose offices are at 1721 Pine Street and N. E. Corner of 55th and Locust Streets, in Philadelphia, tell the story in his own words:

"Gentlemen:

You have been most gracious to Mr. Albert Ramsey.

It has been my pleasure to manage him back to normal efficiency of the upper respiratory tract.

You have aided him at the time he needed aid most. I can say no more, save that I wish both of your companies, the Directors and Officers, long life and continuous success.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM GORDON"

The commencement exercises were held in the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Philadelphia. The Rev. John F. Keenan, C. M. J. C. D., delivered the sermon. High Mass was celebrated in St. Mary's Chapel.

Attendants from this vicinity were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carroll and family, Raymond Kishpaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Nicolas LaPolla and son, Mrs. John Pieters, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry McGrath and family.

$18,000 FOR AN EYE

YOUNGSTOWN, O. — (INS) — After a three-year court battle nine-year-old Melvin C. Holland was awarded $18,000 for an eye injury by the Ohio Supreme Court. Melvin picked up a dynamite cap in a city dumping yard beside a newly-constructed school. He took it home and accidentally exploded it, injuring his eye. The case came before the highest court of the state twice before the insurance company for the construction firm lost the decision.

ED DON GEORGE TAKES GRAPPLING TILT HONORS

TRENTON, N. J., May 23.—Punishing leg and toe holds gave Ed Don George, 230, one of the many holders of strings on the world's wrestling championship, a victory over Tom Alley, 220, in the feature bout at the Arena last night. George gained the first fall with a toe hold in 36:41 and in so doing twisted Alley's knee so badly that Dr. William V. Carroll, State Athletic Commission physician, advised against Alley's return to the ring.

The Australian had all the better of the going in the early part of the fray, making George decidedly uncomfortable with numerous leg holds and the Japanese arm-lock. George then gained his leg hold and held the advantage until the end.

Ed Meske, 215, and Jack Donovan, 224, battled to a 30-minute draw in the outstanding preliminary fray. Neither one of them resorted to illegal tactics and their clean and lively work drew for them a big hand from the fans.

Pat McKay, 220, the Memphis Mauler, got all of the hoos and jeers and the decision, too, over Walter Podolak, 235. McKay tossed his adversary in 21:12 with a body slam. John Katan, 215, one of the fans' "public enemies," drew with Rube Wright, 230, popular Texan, in the other 30-minute fracas.

Tender A Reception To Pastor at Langhorne

LANGHORNE, May 23.—The people of this community and friends from adjacent towns, tendered the annual reception to the Rev. W. W. Jacobs, D. D., Monday evening, at Bethlehem A. M. E. Church.

Mrs. Cuffee was mistress of ceremonies, and the program opened with the singing of the Negro national anthem, "Lift Every Voice and Sing," which was followed by the opening prayer by Lewis Valentine.

Misses Viola Valentine and Betty Nusome sang; and Miss Claudia Robinson read a selection; Miss Mary Crummer gave a short talk commending the Rev. Jacobs on his meritorious work in Langhorne. Mrs. E. Gray gave a reading and J. H. Brown, pastor's steward, and chairman, gave a report of his department. A report was given by Mrs. Joseph Crummer, chairman of the board of trustees, and Mrs. Charlotte Pendleton sang.

An interesting account of her work was given by Miss Samantha Covington, chairman of the Junior Church; followed by Mrs. Nellie Derry, superintendent of the Sunday School. Mr. Cuffee, director of the Wanamaker Band, Philadelphia, played a violin solo. He was accompanied by his daughter, Celena. The next number was a tenor solo by Alfred B. Simpson, and was followed by complimentary remarks by Mrs. Addie Coleman, one of the oldest members of the church. Mrs. E. Crummer, chairman of board number one, introduced the Rev. Fells and Dr. Sullivan, both honored guests from Bristol, who gave short talks. Mr. Price Newtown, told of the fine work the Rev. Jacobs has been doing in this community.

The recreation committee chairman, Mrs. Eunice Derry, brought forth much applause for her report. The pastors' family took part in the program. Mrs. Jacobs, wife of the pastor, expressed delight for the hospitality and friends she has met in Langhorne. Her remarks were supplemented by those of her daughter, Mrs. Hazel Norman, and by her son, Walter Jacobs, Jr.

The pastor received several presentations from friends far and near. The first came from the Clinton J. Lewis Lodge of I. B. P. O. E. of W. No. 210, of Bristol, represented by past exalted ruler Earl J. Ross. The second was from The Daughters Elks of Twilight Temple, Bristol, represented by Daughter Stranthers. There were two local presentations given, one from the Allen League, represented by Miss Samantha Covington, and one from Board Number One, represented by Mrs. Claudia Robinson. This part of the program was followed by remarks by Rev. Eli Barrett in behalf of the church in general. There was a musical selection by Mrs. Linzy, accompanied by Miss Fells, and Mr. Young sang.

Rev. J. L. Mims, Bristol, was another speaker. The Rev. Jacobs, for whom the reception was held, voiced appreciation for the excellent program.

The reception rooms of the church were decorated, and it was here that the assemblage gathered to enjoy a supper of chicken, peas, potatoes, rolls, coffee, ice cream and cake, as the finale of the pastor's reception.

BONUS FOR BABIES

PRAGUE — (INS) — By forging birth certificates, a clerk named Karel Safarik has been swindling an insurance company here in a novel way. Finding that 57 children, on the birth of each of whom a bonus of $7.50 had been paid, did not appear in official records, an insurance company enlisted the help of the police to investigate the mystery. It was discovered that Karel Safarik had forged birth certificates purporting to have been issued to parents in different parts of the city.

BENSALEM HIGH DEFEATS WILLOW GROVE

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 23.—The Bensalem nine let loose with an array of base hits to down Willow Grove to the tune of 18-4, Tuesday. Everyone in the line-up had a hit, and Fletcher led with four singles. Joe Donhart, winning twirler, kept Willow Grove's six hits well scattered.

Bensalem started with six runs in the first, when Torpey and Rigby singled, Edelman was safe on a fielder's choice, Fletcher's single, a double by Paulsworth, and successive singles by Tomlinson, McMahon, Donhart and Torpey. Willow Grove pushed over one in the first on a double by Dutton and an error by Edelman. Bensalem added another run in the second on Edelman's home run. They increased the margin in the third when Tomlinson and Wilkins singled and McMahon sacrificed. Willow Grove pushed another run over in the third when Dutton walked and went to third on Edelman's error and scored on an infield out. They got two more in the fourth when Pierce walked and Betz and Muss singled. Bensalem added five more in the sixth when Torpey was safe on a fielder's choice and Edelman hit his second home run. Fletcher and Paulsworth singled and Tomlinson hit a round tripper. They brought their total up to 18 in the seventh when McMahon was safe on an error by Comant, Donhart walked, Edelman singled, Fletcher doubled and Paulsworth singled and scored on an error by Funston.

Bensalem has won 10 and lost three so far this season and play their last game on Friday when they meet Willow Grove again.

OFFER $3,600 IN PURSES AT VILLAGE FARM RACES

The 1935 harness racing season will get under way next week at The Village Farm, Langhorne, with a program of events which are scheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 30th, 31st and June 1st.

Never in the history of early season racing in this section has such a group of outstanding horses been brought together—aged horses which will be shipped direct from Langhorne to Lexington, Ky., to do battle with the leading Grand Circuit Stables—colts which are entered in the rich turf and leading juvenile events including the $40,000 Hambletonian Stake in addition to the many star performers from the leading half-mile track stables. From the fastest class programmed (the free-for-all handicaps) right down to the events for two-year-olds, the names of outstanding performers appear in the list of entries. Joseph M. McGraw, one of the country's leading racing officials, recently had the following to say in speaking of The Village Farm entries: "I wish to compliment you on the entries received for your meeting. One of the most interesting classes to me is the free-for-all handicap. You have five star handicap horses in the list. Joe Watts holds the record of 2:07 1/2 in a handicap over a half-mile track with La Barient. Mac Hanover holds the record at a mile for geldings of 2:05 1/2. Guy the Tramp raced in 2:02 1/4 in a handicap. Cindy M. Jr. in 2:07 1/4, and Home Brew in 2:08—all from a standing start."

The 2:16 Class Trot will bring together one of the best fields of the meeting. Included in the entries for this event are American Hanover, 2:03 1/2, a son of Guy McKinney, who won a number of races in 1934, Mary Sunshine, 2:07, a daughter of Peter Vole, and the Hambletonian winner, Josias Worthy, 2:03 1/2. Pluto Barient, 2:08, present holder of The Village Farm track trotting record, and at least four or five others capable of giving any of those mentioned a real battle.

In addition to the 2:16 trot, there are three other events on the program for trotters: a two-year-old trot, three-year-old trot, and 2:22 trot. The latter drew the largest entry, 23 having been named when entries closed on April 1st.

What will probably prove to be the fastest class of the meeting, the 2:15 Class Pace, has drawn a high class of tried campaigners. Fastest by record is Hanover the Great, 2:03 1/2, record made last year. Abner T. Clegg (3), 2:04 1/2, is well liked by many. Miss America (3), 2:05 1/2, has many friends, as have Avic, 2:05, Grace Symbol, 2:06, Belle Hanover, 2:06 1/2, Hattie Axe (4), 2:07, and others whose records are not quite so fast.

Much interest is being manifested this year in two-year-old pacers and there are probably more of this age and gait in training than at any time in the history of the sport. Early in the season, a star two-year-old, named New Jersey in compliment to the native state of his owner, appeared at Pinehurst, N. C. The scouts were soon after him with the result that he was sold to L. A. Hallock of Speonk, N. Y., at a long price. He is now known as Harkaway, the name under which he will race at The Village Farm. Another star juvenile in this event is Silverdale by Abbedale. The praises of this filly are being sung by horsemen all over the country. She recently turned the Harrington, Del. half-mile track in 2:12 1/2, finishing the last part of the mile at record-breaking speed. William Caton, for years one of the outstanding trainers, both in this country and in Europe, will be behind the great filly when she turns for the word. Not far behind either of these is Oleander which has trained in 2:16 1/2, and Miss Blanche Ve Relle, a winner at the post-season meeting at Waynesboro, Ga., in 2:14 1/4.

$3,600 in purses will be hung up for the horses which will battle through the stretch on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week and everything points to a program of events which will eclipse, by far, any race meeting ever held at the well-known Bucks County Stock Farm.

Do you know . . . that Jack Fitzgerald of Radcliffe street, and a senior at Northeast Catholic High School, Philadelphia, is captain of the swimming team? . . . At a recent Catholic Interscholastic meet held at Villanova, his team placed second for the championship. . . . Young Jack expects to enter Lafayette College in the Fall.

We got a copy of that snappy High School publication, "The Rambler," the other day and found a number of interesting articles on sports activities participated in by the students that are worth while passing along.

Roman Pico, the lad who surprised everyone when he invaded New York City a couple of weeks ago, and won the National A. A. U. Rope Climbing championship . . . breaking the record . . . This youngster was the only high school student entered.

All other contestants were college men, from such institutions as Yale, Temple, Dartmouth, Army and Navy. . . . This amazing boy defeated the field with ease and particularly Herman Dock, of Dartmouth, the defending champion. . . . Should the local champ defend his title next year and place either first, second or third, he will automatically become an entry for the 1936 Olympic tryouts.

Bristol's high school may not be able to develop a championship football team or an undefeated basketball squad . . . but they surely can develop championship track teams. . . . It's too bad Doylestown, who seem to be able to beat our football teams regularly . . . can't iron out their difference with the Bucks County Interscholastic officials and enter the field and track meet. . . . It would be interesting to see the result.

In the Penn Relays, Bristol's time of 3:39.5, was the lowest ever made by a cardinal and gray quartet. . . . That was some heave of Joe Confi in the shot put event at Sellersville on Saturday . . . 45 feet, 3 1/2 inches. . . . "Wow!"

QUAKERS WIN OUT OVER THE SHAMROCKS

The Quakers scored most of their tallies in two big innings yesterday afternoon as they beat out the Shamrocks, 6-3, on Leedom's field. Home runs were made by C. Breslin and Dave Ennis while the pitching of "Joie" Roe featured. Roe fanned nine batters.

Senate To Sustain Veto

Washington, D. C., May 23.—While conceding victory to President Roosevelt on his veto of the Patman new currency plan to pay the soldiers' bonus, congressional leaders today began a comeback fight to force immediate cash payment by another method. The President's veto of the Patman bill which the House overrode by a vote of 322 to 98, will be sustained in the Senate. A private poll by International News Service revealed at least 36 senators are ready to vote to sustain the veto. This number is four more than is necessary to uphold Mr. Roosevelt's rejection. A two-thirds majority vote is required to override a veto. A Senate vote on the veto is expected during the late afternoon. The upper chamber convened at 10 a. m., two hours before its usual time, by unanimous agreement and debate was permitted but 30 minutes for each Senator.

Steps-Up Budget

Harrisburg, May 23.—Governor George H. Earle's budget recommendation for the general operation of the state government the next two years had been stepped up more than $7,500,000 by the House Appropriations Committee, a study of the general appropriations bill in the form in which it faced the lower chamber, revealed today. Increases in appropriations for 14 departments, aggregating $8,411,000, against decreases in two, amounting to $735,000, resulted in a net boost of $7,676,000, the revised bill showed. Recommendations in the bill for financing various departments of the state government, totaled about $19,000,000 more than the comparable appropriation administration in the second half of the Pinchot administration.

BESLIN'S WILDNESS LOSES GAME, 7 TO 4

Taking advantage of wildness on the part of "Camel" Breslin, the Newport Road Men's club took the measure of the Jefferson A. C. last night on Leedom's field. Final score was 7-4.

Breslin by his wildness caused five runs in the first inning. He walked four batters, hit one, and allowed a single. All this coupled with a damaging error by "Jim" Tulio gave the Newporters enough runs to put the game on ice. In the sixth inning, two triples and a single gave Newport two more runs.

The Jefferson team lacked punch in the early part of the game, filling the bags in the first with no one out and scoring but one run. However, in the last session, they got to Kirk and slammed him for a triple and two singles for three runs. Up until this canto, Kirk had allowed but one hit.
